What Now? Vision and Priorities

I have determined that I will rise up early in the morning to pray each day downstairs in my living room. I've set aside 1 hour in the early morning to pray and read. I have also set aside one hour at night before I go to bed to pray and intercede in my room. Monday through Friday I will wake up at 5:00 am, open my bible, read, meditate on the word, then begin to pray. I will use the strategies given by Gavin Tait to structure my prayer time. In the evenings I will pray and intercede from 8:30 pm until 9:30 pm. Saturday and Sunday's I will wake up at 7:00 am to read and pray. I will set aside time in the evenings on Saturday and Sunday to pray and intercede from 9:00 pm until 10:00 pm. These times may fluctuate a bit on the weekends as we may have other events to tend to, but I will make it my aim to keep these appointments. Prioritizing prayer helps to make it important in my life. It gives it a set time and space so that it is not left out. I want to be diligent to offer my prayers faithfully. After all the prayers of the righteous avail much. There's too much at stake for me not to pray. Prayer will help my vision to align with God's vision. It will keep my motives pure and my heart clean. I believe God will download His vision to me as I set aside and consecrate this time to him in prayer.
